STUDENTS ON BRIEF STRIKE

Anti-War Demonstrations In U. S.

(By the Associated Press) College students were called from their classrooms today by a national committee for a one-hour "strike" on behalf of police, but police in several cities feared clashes with opponents of the movement.

Boston authorities particularly were apprehensive that the antiwar demonstrators might come to harm. The national students' strike committee estimated that 150,000 students, a third of them in New York, would answer the call at 11 a. m. High school pupils were urged to join the older students in the peace demonstrations. Students at the University of Arkansas did not take part in the strike.

WORK OF SES IS HIGHLY PRAISED

Quitman Farm Couple Appreciative

"The assistance the soil erosion service is giving cooperating farmers means much to the area and to cooperators who are struggling with the problem of maintaining their farms during a depression." A. E. Overstreet of Rosebud told a representative of the erosion service.

"The soil erosion service is a fine thing for the country," Mrs. Overstreet said. "If farmers in this part of the area could have had the assistance we are getting now, 40 or 50 years ago, these badly eroded farms would be better today, and we as owners would be better off; it will mean a lot to me to have pasture and meadows, beginning this year."

Mr. and Mrs. Overstreet have a farm of 337 acres, much of it rather rolling. They bought the farm in 1926 and having nothing with which to pay down, they have been working hard since and contending with erosion, drought and depression, meeting taxes, interest and regular payments under great difficulties.

Mrs. Overstreet teaches school and also does the housework, giving attention to their flock of poultry. Mr. Overstreet has cleared 30 acres of land since 1926, and the saddest part of the story is that much of the forty in the area he has carved out of

Incidentally, It's The Four-Bits That Count

"Name, please?"
"State automobile license number?"
"Street address in home town?"
"Do you have any mental or physical defects?"
"Have you ever been licensed as an operator?"
"Age?"
"Height?"
"Sex?"
"Color?"
"Color of hair?"
"Color of eyes?"
"Weight?"
"What members of your family drive your automobile?"
"In what county do you live?"
"Sign your name here, please."
"Please swear that the above information is correct and wholly true."
The above questions have nothing to do with enlisting in the army or navy, or with procuring a passport for Europe.
They are questions asked by Forest Kevinger, of the state revenue department, of applicants for driver's license under the new state law.
Incidentally, they cost 50 cents.
